FIGHT CLUB 2

Back in 1996 Chuck Palahniuk wrote the now legendary paperback novel, Fight Club, which became a major/ cult film starring Brad Pitt and Edward Norton.

Dark Horse has linked with the original writer and in May 2015 we will see the release of Fight Club 2. Their track record for producing comic sequels to film and television shows guarantees that this will be a rock solid sure fire hit, written by Palahniuk and well drawn by Dave Stewart. This type of comic is what our industry needs more of to draw in a wider readership and also to expand the breadth of stories to the existing reader.

Dark Horse is cooking with gas this month as they have another sure fire smash with Harrow County. Written by Cullen Bunn (creator of Sixth Gun from Oni Press), this ongoing series will be a 'Southern gothic fairy tale' both wonderfully charming and flowing from this almost childlike naivety the horror is even more unsettling. So, yes we have zombies, goblins and ghosts, but, expect a refreshingly off beat and scary twist.

Image Comics always have at least one or two innovative new titles every month, sometimes too many for the market to support. Thankfully the titles keep coming as the market slowly catches up with the varied and intelligent comics that are currently available.

This month the pick of the bunch for me are: Injection, by Warren Ellis writer and art by Declan Shalvey and Jordie Bellaire. The premise is that five geniuses created an injection which was supposed to have improved life on Earth, but failed spectacularly. The world is now a wild and haunted place and the 'five' are travelling the world trying to deal with what they have created; and Sons Of The Devil by Brian Buccellato (New York Times best-selling novelist) and artist Toni Infante explores three decades of a family entwined in cults and the dark side of human nature. My own experience of comics written by novelists is that they bring a refreshing twist to comic writing as they adapt their prose style to the comic medium.

Over at Marvel the Secret Wars event is in full swing with multiple new mini-series and one-shots available. The one of most interest, to me at least, is Ultimate End #1 of 5. The Ultimate universe, when it started, was a bright vibrant revisit to the beginnings of Spider-Man, Fantastic Four and X-Men. It worked brilliantly for nearly ten years, then the creative direction was lost and it has floundered ever since. Some of the artwork on recent series has been appalling. This, then, is the swan song of the once brave, revamped universe. I hope that this series does justice to the original idea.

I have been thoroughly enjoying Superior Iron man as the reversed odious character of Tony Stark has played out. Now it moves on as Pepper Potts is taking on the armour. Fabulous, or what? The current Thor series has been working incredibly well and I look forward to this female version of Iron Man.

PROVIDENCE AND ALAN MOORE

Once again Alan Moore is at his best as he deconstructs all of HP Lovecraft's concepts and then reinvents them inside a carefully researched history of American history. This is both sequel and prequel to Neonomicon. Providence #1 starts in 1919 and blends the mythical visions of HP Lovecraft flawlessly into the cauldron of racial and sexual intolerance that defined that era. If you love his work, buy it. If you have never read his work before, buy it. If you love horror, buy it. Do you think I want you to buy this?

As always there are far too many titles I want to read and recommend so I am keeping it down to the short list above. Our medium is still the greatest, beating, in my opinion, film and television when done well and fights to a noble draw with a novel.

That's all for this month. Remember now, keep on reading.
