LONDON SUPER CONVENTION MARCH 2015

I have always found that one of the great joys of comic collecting is meeting with fellow collectors, retailers and creators. Another joy is finding that long sought after missing issue.

Being in the shop means that on a daily basis we all get to meet like minded people who become more than customers, after a few months they soon become friends. On a weekly basis we get offered collections. In some of these we find those long sought issues.

However, the best occasion of all is a comic convention. At these you meet fellow collectors, retailers and creators, plus the added bonus of finding hundreds of tables displaying rare collectibles, recent bargains and sometimes rare collectible bargains. These can be comics, original art, toys, trading cards, t-shirts, favourite creators signing for free (or for a small charge) or a valued memento. Then the coup-de-gras - the panels. Listen to respected peers discussing that very stuff of being, comics, the meaning of life and everything. If that isn't heaven, then for those of us that enjoy a beer or two,

there is the hotel bar until the early hours where meeting like minded people is virtually guaranteed.

From March 13th to 15th I attended the London Super Convention at Excel, Docklands. This convention, now in its' fifth year, is really punching all the right buttons. There are tables galore of back issues, bargains and high end collectibles. The artist alley has as many as a 100 creators for you to meet. On top of these great people are the headliners like Neal Adams, Charlie Adlard, Garth Ennis, John Romita Jnr, Jonathan Ross and Arthur Adams. Some charge for signatures, most don't. They all will do head sketches for various sums of money, but even better in my book, they sell pages of their original art. I bought a page of Alan Davis Hulk fighting the Thing, inked by Mark Farmer, who then signed it for me. This for the princely sum of £100. A bargain.

There are panels all day on the Saturday catering for all tastes and interests.

Then the most glorious spectacle is the Cosplay. None of that manga nonsense, but superheroes aplenty. If I saw 100 then I saw 1,000 people all in spectacular costumes. Some people should not have been in such tight fitting spandex, but who cares, they were having a blast! Three female Loki's, numerous Catwomen, Storm, Black Widow, The Thing, Iron Man, Poison Ivy, Judge Dredd, Spider-Man, Riddler, the list goes on. All of this happening in a large airy space with everyone in good humour and enjoying what was a fantastic weekend.

Even I got caught up in the event. While having a quiet moment outside the exhibition hall, drinking coffee and reading a copy of Master Of Kung Fu #50 that I needed to plug a hole in my collection, I found I needed Iron Man to protect me. See the photo below. Admittedly you can only see a grey hat, my face is hidden to protect my secret identity of Biff Averre, retailer extraordinaire.

I cannot recommend this London event too highly. Even the hotels, if booked early, are great value. I pre-booked in November 2014 and paid £85 a night for the Novotel, which was next door to the exhibition centre. This is a modern, bright, clean hotel, in the near centre of London for £85! The hotel bar on Saturday evening was buzzing with life and fans.

If you cannot make this event then look for one near you as conventions, small and large are popping up all over, from The Lake District to Bristol, London to Leeds.

I must just drop one name as over the weekend I got to meet Neal Adams, due to my supplying him with 36 copies of one of his graphic novels, and I found him charming and amusing. He signed 3 comics from my collection so I went away very happy. I couldn't afford a page of his artwork though, they cost thousands!

I hope to meet some of you there next year and maybe at Leeds Thought Bubble over the 14th and 15th of November 2015.

As always, read what you enjoy, collect what you enjoy and live life for the moment, don't put off until tomorrow the comic you can read today!
