NEW SERIES AND ONE-SHOTS FOR JUNE

BATMAN '66 MEETS GREEN HORNET #1

Kevin Smith, Ralph Garman, Ty Templeton, Alex Ross

In 1967, television history was made when two masked crime fighters met in a historic crossover. Now, superstar filmmaker Kevin Smith and actor/comedian Ralph Garman join forces with artist Ty Templeton (Batman '66) to bring these two iconic characters and their famous partners together again. Set in the continuity of that earlier team-up, Batman, The Green Hornet, Robin and Kato must go up against a very different General (formerly Colonel) Gumm. What crime could be so deadly as to force these rivals to put aside their differences and join forces again? And what surprise does Gumm have up his sticky sleeve? Co-published with Dynamite Entertainment.

Warning: Contains Captain America, The Winter Soldier Spoilers!!!*

Something strange has happened in the 'real world' Marvel Universe. Two totally different companies have the rights to produce Marvel films. The X-Men and Spider-Man produced by Sony who only have a loose grasp of the source material and Marvel, who up until recently, also had a loose grasp of their own source material. As The Scarlet Witch and Quicksilver are owned by Sony via the X-Men franchise, Marvel have decided to use these characters, but , under a different name. Bova, who had been quietly bringing up the twins that Magda gave birth to in Wundagore mountain, will be shocked that these twins have been abducted by Baron Strucker to be used as a weapon against the Avengers in an upcoming Marvel movie. Sorry, I have just seen Captain America Winter Soldier and actually sat through all the credits so I could see the teaser trailers. Once again, Marvel Studios have nailed the character whilst modernising for the current movie audience. My favourite scene was Captain America addressing the S.H.I.E.L.D. staff as he exposed the Hydra agents embedded next to them. A tear came to my eye as his speech exhorting the true S.H.I.E.L.D. agents to act, nailed what Captain America means to me. Whilst ruminating over how accepted the superhero world now is it occurred to me that due to the plethora of movies now spawned by comics a new generation of comic speculator has evolved right under the nose of the High Evolutionary.

These speculators who have realised that it is too late to buy the first appearance of Captain America (Avengers #4, first Modern Age) at a bargain price , currently £4,000 and rising, are diving into the almost forgotten back issue market every time a new villain appears, like Baron Strucker, and buying, in this case, Sgt Fury and His Howling Commandos #5. Formerly maybe £50 in near mint, now £300 and climbing.

Any Thanos appearance has climbed steadily in price ever since his cameo at the end of the last Avengers movie. Normally I am a very savvy comic collector and retailer and I have to admit to not being aware that there was a solo Thanos story as a back up feature in Logan's Run #6. This apparently was the first solo story featuring Thanos. My retailers antennae was vibrating when two different people had contacted me asking if I stocked Logan's Run #6. This, a series with fundamentally no interest, then people want #6, not issue #1??!

Then there are new TV series being made or optioned that are causing a great deal of activity in the back issue market. Most recently Preacher #1 which would languish in the back issue bins at £9.99 and not move has been moving at £100 and upwards. Now iZombie, which no-one seemed interested in, has started shifting with the first issue going for over £10. The reason, I discover, is that it is the subject of a pilot program and the centre of new speculator buying.

Combine the above with the current trend to buy into nearly every Image number one in case they strike lucky with another Peter Panzerfaust, and there is a large community that are once again buying, but not reading.

Do book buyers buy the latest Ian Rankin with expectation that it will rise in value?

Do you buy SFX only to see it multiply in value?

Heck no. You buy them to read them! Gosh what an incredible idea. In fact if everyone read the comics that they bought, then a lot of really poor comics might not last more than one or two issues.

Over the decades my advice to everyone that has ever asked about what should they buy to make money on has been "Buy what you enjoy reading and if it makes you money further down the line, then that is a bonus".

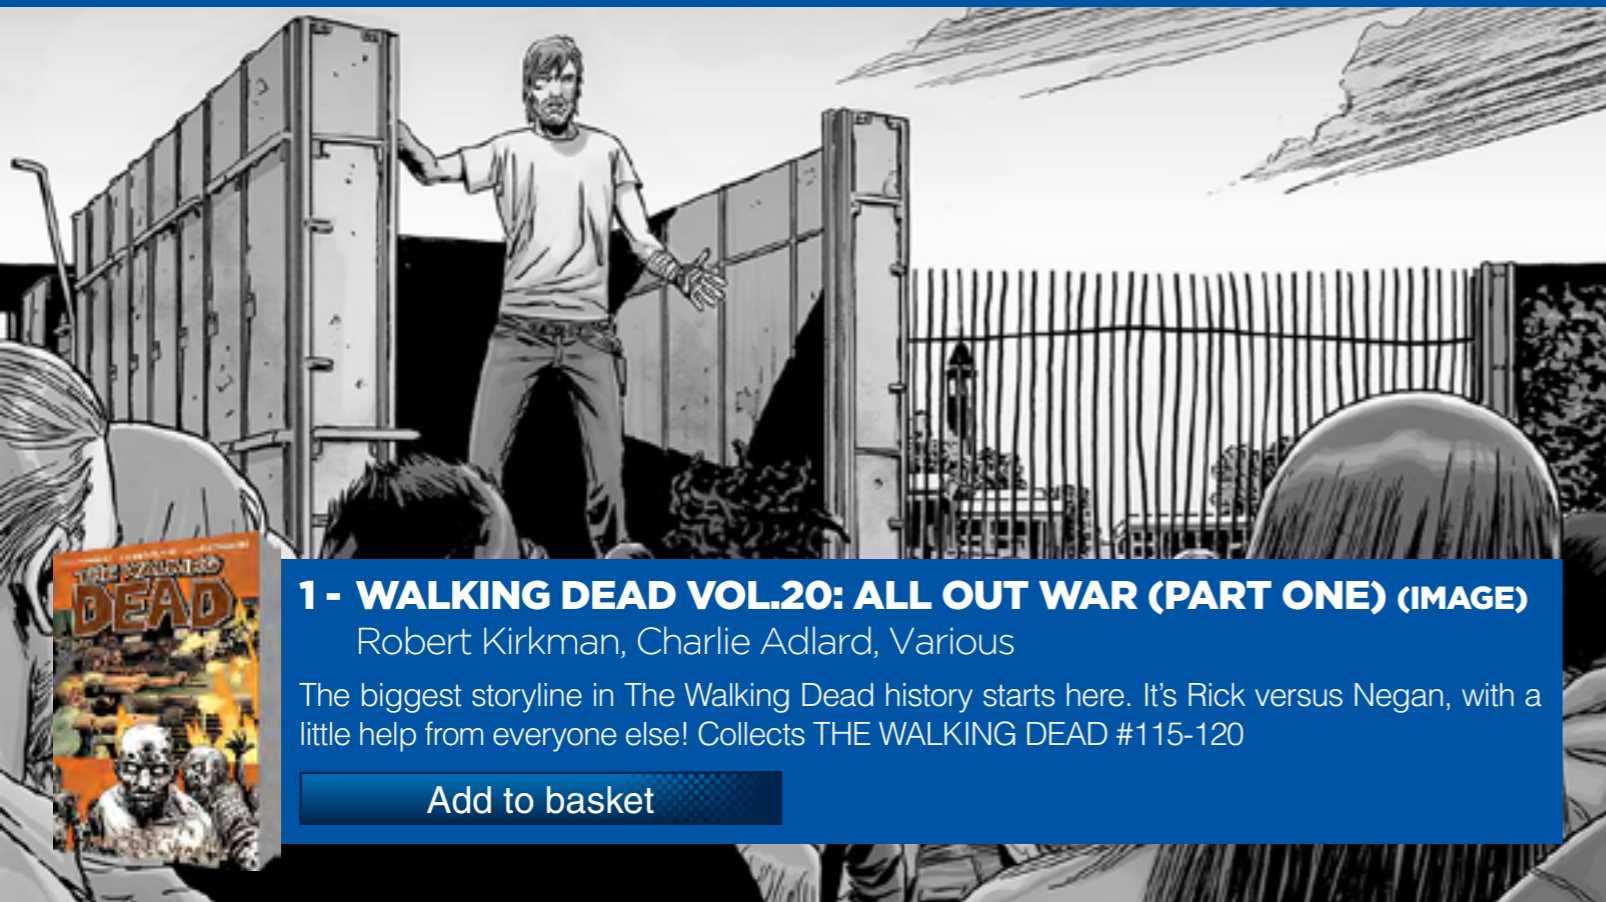

Just as Jonathan Tann found when selling back some Spider-Man comics. He was genuinely surprised and pleased with what I paid him. Unlike the collector who asked if he should buy into a title that had already reached £100 for #1. I advised no. He still went and bought it and five years later he couldn't give it away. I must say I forgot to ask if he read it! I did have to say I told you so when offered the comic.

Lastly, just to wind the speculators up, I must mention the upcoming FREE COMIC BOOK DAY, May 3rd this year, and the fact that somewhere amidst the official FCBD giveaways will be a comic that will set eBay alight. My lips are sealed at the moment, but there are at least five contenders.

Don't forget, true believers, comics raise the level of your imagination every time, transporting you to places and times beyond your imagining. That is the true value of comics - priceless!
