HARVEY PEKAR

Harvey Pekar is renowned for his series of autobiographical comic books, American Splendour. These stories cover Pekar's life in Cleveland, Ohio. We see his work at a Veterans administration hospital, his relationships with colleagues and patients, using the unique meld of words and pictures that only comics can offer to really illuminate the everyday in an interesting and thought provoking way.

In May's Previews from publishers 'Hill and Wang' comes a really thought provoking memoir, 'Not The Israel My Parents Promised Me'. He recounts the entire history of the Jews to explain how he lost his faith in the state of Israel. He grew up a staunch supporter of the Jewish State but over the course of his life became disaffected with the modern state of Israel.

Personally I have always found it unbelievable that a nation that has suffered persecution for thousands of years can be inflicting similar actions upon the Palestinians.

This book is on my 'must buy' list and I look forward to the July release.

If you are politically minded or just want to see how the medium of comics can be used to full effect, pre-order this or make a note to visit your local comic book store for it in July.

PEKAR, FCBD & NAME DROPPING

Pekar is normally published by Dark Horse or DC Comics but I suspect that the contentious content of this book has meant he has had to look elsewhere for a publisher. To examine and contradict the accepted Jewish viewpoint of Israel will be much like questioning the Islamic faith. Strong feelings will be raised.

FREE COMIC BOOK DAY

This annual event has now become not only a massively successful and important day in the comic world's calendar, but a renewal of my faith in the paper medium of comics versus digital.

With a queue through the Colchester shop and one hundred yards up the road to our local Cash Converters store, hundreds of local fans came to claim their yearly freebies. Every year I get in more FCBD comics and every year we manage to run out by about 2.30pm.

Naturally a few people just turn up to claim the free comics and then disappear for the year, but the majority hang around and queue to dip into the thousands of 50p comics and this year's bargain £1 graphic novels. Once again we had a large number of 12 to 15 year olds, some with parents, attending for the first time. They not only bought 50p comics, but also browsed through the massive (30,000) selection of normally priced back issues and with such a joy and excitement that it made this, now old, man's heart swell with pleasure that our hobby can give so much.

Combined with art competitions, zombie make-up and a maniacal

Joker, plus good weather, this is one of my favourite times of the year.

If you didn't make it to Colchester, Glasgow or Southend please, please, please try for next year. You will not be disappointed. Remember the comics are only free if you visit a comic shop!

NAME DROPPING

Walking through town yesterday, deep in thought and not really looking at people as they passed, I was pulled from my own meandering thoughts by a hearty yell of "Hello, how are you doing?" A gentleman was coming towards me, his hand out to shake my hand. It was only Pat Mills, one of the godfathers of British comics (Slaine, ABC Warriors, Marshall Law, Requiem and editor of Battle Action to name but a few of his credits).

Back, when fifteen years old and scouring the newsagents for both US and UK comics, I would have laughed if someone had told me that, in my later life, creators I admired and whose work I sort out would one day greet me in the street on first name terms.

I know it is name dropping, but that brief meeting made me smile for a day. I hope you all have something in the next month that affects you in the same way. Drop me a line if you do. Maybe the first time your child says "Daddy" or "Make mine Marvel"!

See you next month.
